

Art teachers operating Upland gallery

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Dennis and Laura Garcia are involved in three phases of art — the creation, promotion and education.

Both are art teachers at Montclair High School. Both have unique techniques in their approach to their creative works, and together they operate an art gallery, Chrysalis, in Upland.

Their objective in having a gallery is to help striving artists have a showcase for their works.

The Chrysalis, the metamorphosis of a caterpillar into a butterfly, is the Garcias' gallery symbol.

The Garcias found a gallery "home" in an industrial complex at 1495 Ninth St., Upland, in space 309. To find the gallery, one must wind around the area until spotting the Chrysalis sign in the back row of buildings.

Gallons of white paint, track lights and some directors' chairs around a big square table, transformed the warehouse into an attractive gallery. There seems to be a bottomless pot of coffee behind the scenes.

Aside from exhibiting the works of artists they know, the Garcias put ads in newspapers about the availability of their gallery. When contact is made, Laura and Dennis decide on the talent and where it would be worthwhile to themselves and the artist to display.

Since October of 1980, the gallery has had the Chaffey Art Faculty Show, photographs, "West End Heavy Metal," by the late Jeff Cole, and "Eighteen Celsius Lap Robes" by Dee Cole, an exhibit of Dennis' work called "Scenographic Analysis," "Recent Work in Color Photography" by Roger Camp, "L.A. by Day/L.A. by Night" by John Fox and "Drawings and Oil Paintings" by Siglia Vas.

Planned for the future are exhibits of paintings, ceramics, prints and drawings, a retrospective of photography of Jeff Cole's work and an invitational photography show.

The art work by Laura Garcia is unusual in that she sees, for example, a sweatshirt jacket tossed in a heap. She will photograph it, then put it on paper in a realistic pencil drawing. "I see them (jackets in repose) as personalities," Laura said. She recently has been working in colored pencils with interesting results.

Her drawings are to be contemplated, accepted or rejected, depending upon the viewers' interest.

Dennis' art works definitely show an individual technique of thin lines going in all directions, shapes and odd pieces of meaningful materials glued to the paper. Though not collages in the pure sense of the word, his art is a conglomerate of memories, impressions and ideas. The more the viewer studies them, the more meaning emerges.

The intention of the couple was not particularly to have a place to display their work, but to provide a gallery for their art friends and other striving artists to have a place to exhibit, gather around the big table to talk about art and a place for the public to enjoy and learn about art.

They named the gallery, Chrysalis after the metamorphosis of a caterpillar into a butterfly ... a place for Dennis and Laura Garcia, both art teachers at Montclair High School, operate an art gallery, the Chrysalis, in Upland. The gallery is to help striving artists have a showcase for their works. Laura Garcia is working on one of her pencil sketches with one of her drawings on the board. Garcia's art technique is highly individualistic using a modified collage expression. The gallery is located in space 309 of the complex at 1495 Ninth St., Upland. Visitors are invited from 4 to 6 p.m. weekdays and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekends.

the budding artist to exhibit for a fee, thus having a place to expose their paintings, ceramics, photographs, fiber work ... or whatever skill ... to the viewing public.

Laura Garcia earned her bachelor's degree in art from California State University, Fullerton, and her master's of fine arts from Claremont Graduate School.

She is a 1968 graduate of Upland High School.

Dennis Garcia graduated in 1958 from Garfield High School in East Los Angeles, and obtained his bachelor of art's degree from California State, Los Angeles. Garcia said he worked two years in a community center in Los Angeles before he received a scholarship to Claremont Graduate School.

The artists, who find teaching "satisfying," would like to have the Chrysalis Gallery become self-supporting. Until then, the couple spend weekdays after school and weekends at the gallery. Laura and Dennis Garcia feel they are being "a community service" for artists.

Visitors are invited to drop into the gallery from 4 to 6 p.m. weekdays and from 11 a.m. p.m. Sundays. The current exhibitions is by Rita Dibert whose hand-tinted photographs are hanging through May 16.

From May 23 to June 13, ceramics by Laura Mercer and prints and drawings by Jan Mehn will be exhibited.

Fired Upland officer loses bid for reinstatement

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

An appeal by former Upland Police Agent Daniel Mendoza to regain his job was denied by the City Council last week, when that body overturned a recommendation by the Personnel Review Board to reinstate the officer.

Mendoza, a 9-year veteran with the department, was fired Dec. 5, 1980 on grounds of dishonesty and conduct tending to discredit the department and fellow officers.

Police Chief Coy Estes said in the termination notice that accusations Mendoza made against Sgt. Martin Thouvenell regarding alleged police brutality were shown to be unfounded.

"Fellow officers ... must be able to rely upon an officer's loyalty and honesty," said Estes in the letter. "Your actions have demonstrated disloyalty, not only to Sgt. Thouvenell, but to other fellow officers whom you (implicitly) accused of lying, in order to support your own story."

The city's three-man Personnel Review Board held two days of hearings in February on the matter, and concluded that Mendoza did not lie in his testimony. They said any discrepancies between his account of the events and those of other officers present were primarily the result of the 4-year time-lapse between the actual event and the interviews.

The review board said Mendoza should be reinstated to his former position and rank, but be given disciplinary action in the form of a 90-day suspension without pay for waiting four years to report Thouvenell's alleged use of excessive force.

The board dealt solely with the charges against Mendoza, and did not address the question of Thouvenell's alleged brutality.

The first instance Mendoza cited in which Thouvenell allegedly used excessive force involved a robbery suspect in November 1976.

Mendoza testified at the review board hearing that Thouvenell grabbed the handcuffed suspect, who was prone on the ground, turned him partially over on his back and placed the gun against the suspect's head. Mendoza then said Thouvenell threatened to "blow (the suspect's) head off" if he didn't reveal the location of his partner.

During the review board hearings, no other officers present at the scene could confirm Mendoza's account. The suspect, now living in Tennessee, was contacted, and said he could not recall such a threat being made.

Mendoza said at the hearing he withheld making the charges because he reportedly spoke to Thouvenell about the 1976 incident, and told him if it ever happened again he would report it to the department.

In his original complaint and in testimony before the board, Mendoza referred to two other incidents in which he said he thought Thouvenell used excessive force. One involved the alleged choking of a suspect that he heard other officers talking about, and the second a case in which a suspect's nose was allegedly broken, reportedly after he was handcuffed.

When Mendoza allegedly heard about the two other cases, he told the board he thought it was time to make the full report.

The review board did not investigate the choking instance, as it was not included in Mendoza's termination notice. They did say they recognized his statement regarding the second incident was based on "hearsay," but that other officers at the scene confirmed Mendoza's story.

The District Attorney's office investigated this case, and concluded excessive force was not used.

Sam Wells, attorney for the police department, pointed out in the hearing and in Tuesday's session that Mendoza's complaint followed Thouvenell's promotion to sergeant, a post Mendoza had also applied for. Mendoza protested the action to the Fair Employment Practices Commission, stating in his complaint that Thouvenell had been involved in at least three instances of using excessive force.

At Tuesday's council meeting, Wells also staged a demonstration of the three different versions of the 1976 incident. Off-duty police officers were recruited to re-enact the scene, against the strident objections of Gregory Petersen, attorney for Mendoza.

Petersen argued the demonstration should be considered as evidence, and not allowed at the council session where only the final report and 567-page transcript of the personnel board hearings were to be discussed.

His objections were overruled by City Attorney Don Maroney, and Wells was allowed to proceed with the demonstration.

The actors took their positions, some sprawled onto the red carpeting as the suspect, and others with pointed fingers signifying Thouvenell's gun. Council members got out of their seats to gather around the tableau, while Wells narrated his interpretations of testimonies given at the hearing.

The council members went into a one-hour executive session following presentations by the two attorneys.

When they reconvened, Mayor John McCarthy announced the decision to terminate Mendoza, and said Maroney would have a statement on their decision prepared for the May 18 council meeting.

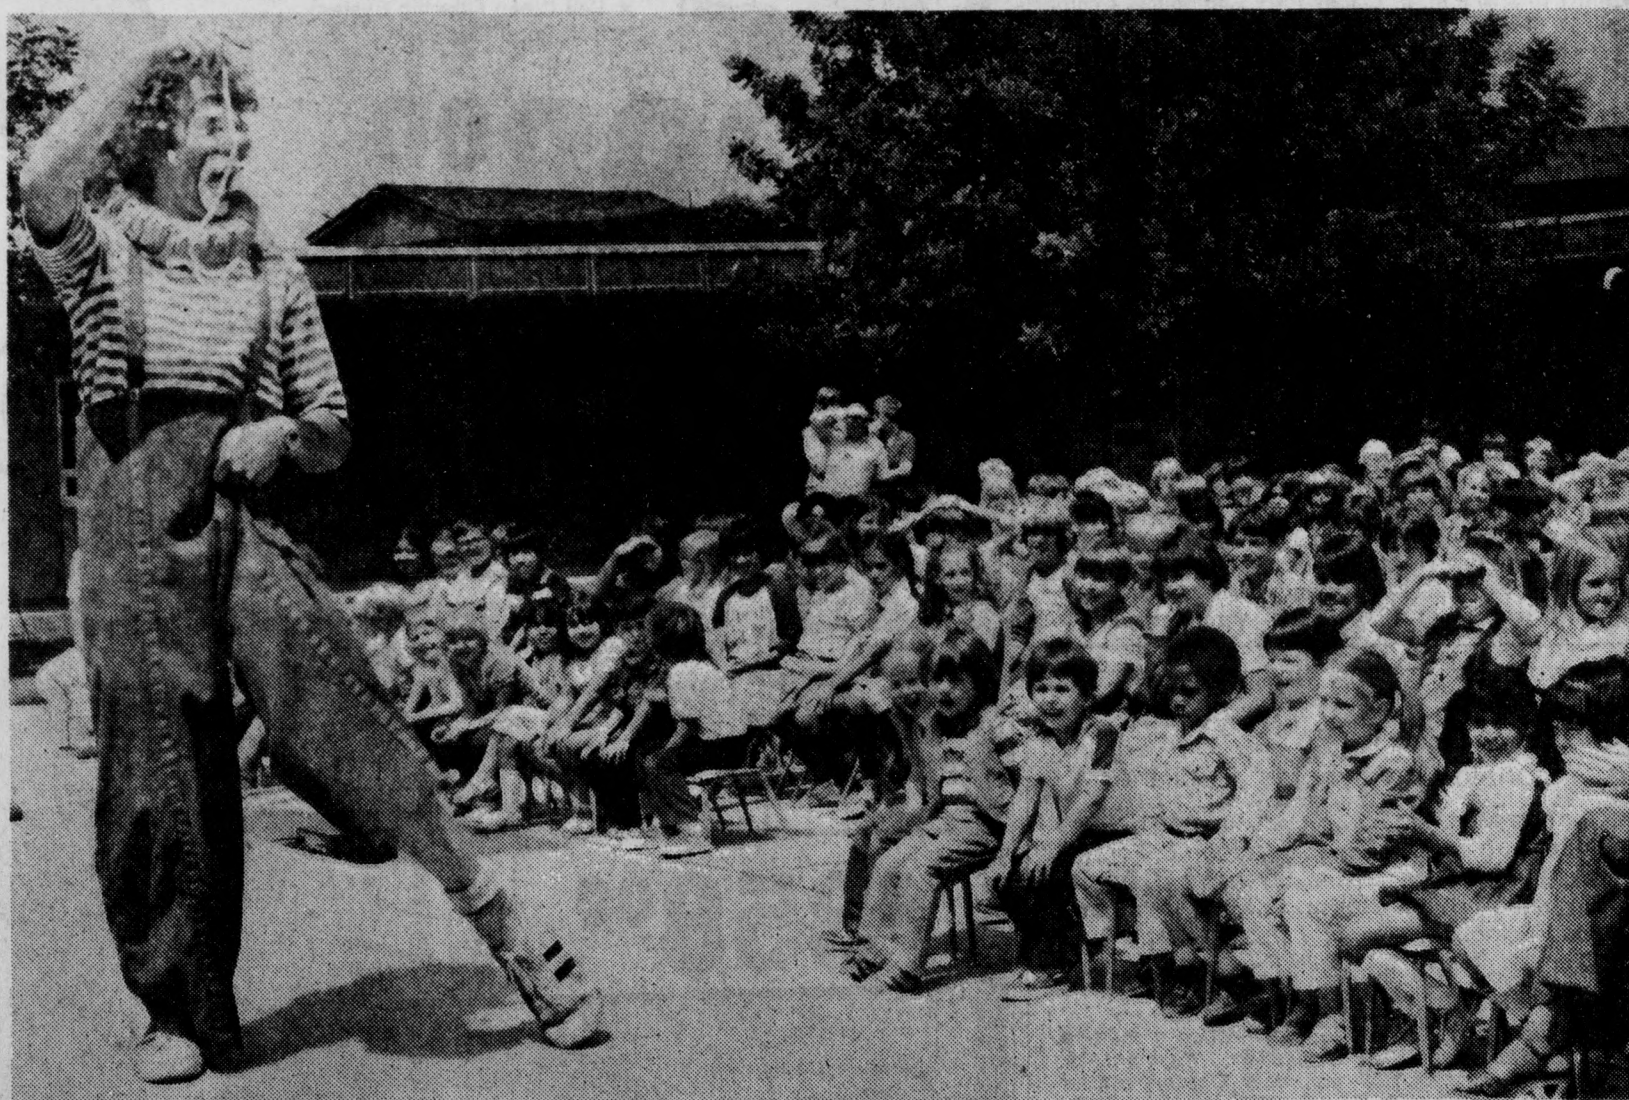

Estes said he thought the council acted justly.

"My original decision to terminate Mendoza was based on an intensive internal investigation," he said. "Based on those facts, I felt I didn't have any decision but to terminate."

Mendoza, present at the meeting, left the council chambers immediately after the decision was announced.

Petersen said he would need to consult with his client before making any official statements, but that further legal action in the form of a suit would probably be pursued.

"I don't think the council's decision will stand in court," Petersen said. "He's (Mendoza) been denied his right of due process."

Testing team will conduct health $17,000 raised evaluations at church in Ontario

A health testing team from the Loma Linda University School of Health will be at the Ontario Seventh-day Adventist Church for the second consecutive year to administer health risk evaluations including cardiac stress tests on a treadmill May 17. This program is available to the public.

Appointments are required and should be made by May 11 and will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis starting at 8 a.m. and continuing through to 5 p.m. Phone 987-7290 or 987-0434.

A $45 fee will defray the cost of university personnel and equipment. There is an optional comprehensive blood test that costs an additional $15 per person.

The testing will begin with a health and risk profile and medical history questionnaire. The participant's weight and height will be determined and resting blood pressure and heart rate measurements will be taken.

Tests will be administered to evaluate respiratory function. A 12-lead resting electrocardiogram will be taken and data will be evaluated by a physician. If there are no contra-indications, a treadmill test will be given to assess the function of the heart during exercise stress. An optional blood test is available which may help to detect such problems as anemia, parathyroid disease, poor kidney function, atherosclerosis - hyperlipidemia, bone and joint disease, poor liver function, and poor endocrine function.

Upon completion of the tests, the participant will be counseled by a specialist in preventive health care. The specialist interprets the test results, advises the participant regarding exercise, diet and lifestyle, and answers questions which the participant may have. Literature on exercise and diet will be available.

According to director Gunter Fuchs, DHSc, the purposes of the program are first to establish a person's current health profile or baseline from which future progress may be measured. Second we want to increase a person's motivation for entering and adhering to exercise, diet and lifestyle which are consistent with good health. Third is to provide clearance for participation in strenuous work and exercise.

An 11-hour golf tournament and banquet raised a total of $17,000 for the City of Hope Tuesday, said Tony Peich, the Chino chapter chairman.

Peich said this year's drive was the most successful in its 11-year history. It topped last year's collections by $5,000. A total of 349 golfers participated in the tournament held at Los Serranos Country Club.

Part of the banquet that followed the golf tournament included an auction which netted $3,500.

Bud Coppess, a San Bernardino County marshal assigned to Chino, was banquet chairman.

Bob Hildebrand won low gross honors while John Gills won the low net flight.

'Looking Well Into the Future'

Activities will mark National Hospital Week

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

Several activities are planned at San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland in celebration of National Hospital Week from May 10 through May 18. "Looking Well Into the Future" will be the theme.

Baby-sit

Students from 14 area junior high and high schools have been invited to attend a baby-sitting forum from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. May 13 in Aita Auditorium at San Antonio Community Hospital, Upland.

Approximately 235 students are expected to attend this special event planned during National Hospital Week.

After Mark Rankin, assistant hospital administrator, talks about the purpose of the forum, Richard Millar, director of safety and security, will talk about "Safety Hints" and Gary Edwards and Bob Pablich of the Upland Fire Department, will discuss "Fire Hazards."

Following these presentations,

Sgt. Tom Barnhart of the Upland Police Department will tell participants about "Securing the Home" and "What to do With Problems."

At 9:40 a.m., Sandy Hardy and Michelle Small of the Chaffey College Children's Center will discuss "Keeping Children Happy." A break will follow at 10 a.m.

The final presentation, scheduled for 10:15, will be "Sudden Illness and First Aid" by Dr. Gilbert Zini and Clara Ruddell, R.N., SACH Emergency Room.

There will be time for questions before adjournment.

Media teachers from local schools have been invited to bring journalism students and/or video-tape crews.

Blood pressure

As part of the "Looking Well Into the Future" theme of National Hospital Week, San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland will sponsor a free blood pressure screening for the community from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday in the Dental Center, located near the emergency and outpatient area.

Cardiovascular disease is the number one cause of death in the United States. One of the main warning signals for this disease is high blood pressure. Yet people with high blood pressure often are unaware that they have it. The only way to be sure is have your blood pressure checked. Physicians recommend this be done at least once a year.

Children's Tours

All year long, the SACH Auxiliary helps children be prepared for the future by conducting tours of the hospital. Many tours are scheduled this week in anticipation of hospital week.

Cub Scout Troop, Pack 648 of Cucamonga, will take a tour at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, while children from the First Baptist Preschool in Ontario will visit at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Other groups interested in taking a tour of the hospital, must make reservations. Call Irene Nugent, current children's tour chairman, at 981-8583.

Mother's Day

SACH will celebrate Mother's Day Sunday by presenting a rose to each mother who is a patient in the hospital.

In the maternity wing, there will be a reception for new mothers and their families, and a feeding spoon, engraved with the hospital symbol, will be presented to each new baby.

The hospital is willing to arrange a pre-photo session with a mother and new baby or a photo session in the alternative birth unit with a mother, new baby and members of the immediate family.

Fashion show

One of the special events at San Antonio Community Hospital in commemoration of National Hospital Week will be a fashion show and brunch, "Summer Fashions for Mastectomees," from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday in Aita Auditorium at the hospital.

Bid for classrooms awarded

Wall Street, real estate locked in battle

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

For years and years and years, Wall Street and the real estate industry have battled each other for the investor dollar.

Now they're fighting for President Reagan's ear.

Yes, the battle rages anew. Wall Street — as financier for the nation's corporations — thinks that all those hundreds of billions of investment dollars should be poured into the financing of new plants and equipment, via stocks and bonds distributed through the nation's brokerage houses.

It's crucial today, says Wall Street, because the nation's productivity — growing at negative rates three years in a row — is an international disgrace. Our plants and equipment are ancient by comparison with the plants and equipment of the competitors whipping us, such as Japan. We must turn from consumption to investment, says Wall Street, rubbing its hands in anticipation.

But the real estate industry has an argument, too: People. Poor, down-trodden, unclad, but most importantly, unboxed people.

The youth — reaching family formation age in unprecedented numbers. We must have 2 million or 2.5 million housing starts a year just to keep even with this demand.

Maybe the Vietnam era young people — if deprived of their need for shelter — will turn to the streets again. Maybe they'll live in the streets. The money should go into housing, says the real estate industry, rubbing its hands in anticipation.

Mr. Reagan is in the middle — with both ears exposed to the combatants' sharp teeth — because much depends on the administration's tax policy. If, in the interest of productivity, the thrust of Mr. Reagan's program favors faster depreciation, investment tax credits, cuts in corporate and capital gains taxes, elimination of double taxation of dividends and the like, it will be a victory for the investment fraternity.

Mr. Reagan's current program embraces some of these things, especially depreciation reform.

If the needs of the Treasury demand it, taxes now favoring real estate — even including the ability to write off interest payments on personal income taxes — could be revised.

Anthony Downs, an economist for Washington, D.C.'s Brookings Institution, fired a salvo in an article in Across the Board, a magazine put out by New York's Conference Board.

Carefully stating his case, Downs said, "For more than half a decade, our nation has been experiencing a slowdown in productivity growth and recently an absolute decline in productivity."

"We need to make huge capital investments in energy production, energy conservation and modernization of our industrial plant and equipment to compete in world markets."

"Yet more American capital flows into mortgages for housing than into any other single use, including business investment or state and local government finance. We should be asking: Is our system of financing housing diverting too many resources from other investments that might help counteract declining American productivity?"

As if to buttress Downs' case, the New York Stock Exchange brought out a study showing that the United States ranked a dismal sixth in economic performance among eight major industrial nations between 1974 and 1980 — trailing Japan, West Germany, France, Sweden and Canada.

Commented NYSE Chairman William M. Batten, "Although our study sketches a dismal picture of United States and world economic trends, it also carries a message of hope for the future of the U.S. economy. Policies that increase the rate of savings and investment can make a significant difference in the rate of economic growth and, in the longer run, inflation and unemployment as well."

At the heart of the United States' miserable economic performance is the "low level of capital investment," said Batten.

The real estate industry immediately fired its own shots: Peter Treadway, economist for the Federal National Mortgage Association, said, "What housing's critics are doing is trying to find a scapegoat — a scapegoat for America's disappointing industrial performance. It seems they think that by cutting off the housing leg, they can restore a healthy credit flow to other economic limbs."

But housing has little to do with the problem, Treadway said. Housing's share of credit has remained stable for 30 years — "In fact, the United States has devoted a lesser portion of income to housing than have most other industrialized countries, including Japan and Germany — the two countries most admired by the industrializers," he said.

The Chino school board has awarded a bid to Modulaire Leasing Co. for 14 portable classrooms at a cost of $402,558.

The firm submitted the lowest of three bids. The school district will make seven annual payments of $86,150 for the portable classrooms. These are needed for 1981-82 to accommodate increasing enrollment in the school district. The trailers will be at a number of school sites, according to a district memorandum.

Before trustees voted 4-0 to award the bid at last week's board meeting, H.C.

Tanner, assistant superintendent for business services, noted that the Modulaire bid was $20,000 below an earlier bid submitted by the same company.

The board had voted 3-2 three weeks ago to reject all bids on the portable classrooms due to an irregularity in the bidding procedure by one of the bidders.

At the April 7 session, Superintendent Duane Stiff explained that the board was acting on advice of the County Counsel's Office in rejecting the bids.

In the second round of bids, Facilities Leasing Co.

submitted a bid of $417,969.60 and Mobile Facilities submitted a bid of $423,106.

In other action, the board unanimously adopted a reorganization plan with revised work calendars for staff personnel. The plan will go into effect July 1.

School's 11th annual projects day

Students at Harvey Mudd turn science fiction ideas into reality

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

Ideas that were once dreams of science fiction writers were turning into reality Thursday under the watchful eyes of students at Harvey Mudd College in Claremont.

Hosting their 11th annual projects day, students unveiled prototypes of their own visions.

The results of their year-long efforts dealt with such far-reaching ideas as solar energy, magnetic recording devices, nuclear safety, speech recognition by computers and space satellites. In all, students displayed 31 projects for visitors at the campus.

One of the more attention-grabbing projects dealt with use of solar tracking mirrors that could be used to generate power on Catalina Island.

Like all projects, students were sponsored by a company that is part of the industry.

In this case, the project was sponsored by Southern California Edison, which is in charge of providing power to the island's residents.

Robert Gurrola, one of the students who worked on the project, explained the group was faced with the major problem as to where the solar collectors could be placed.

"There's not much flatland on the island," he said, noting that it would be difficult to place the units on Catalina's steep hillsides.

The community of Avalon currently obtains its power from diesel engines and costs, Gurrola said, are increasing rapidly.

Facing both problems, Edison asked students to devise a solar collection system that would float on a reservoir near the island's northwest coast while at the same time providing a good portion of Avalon's power.

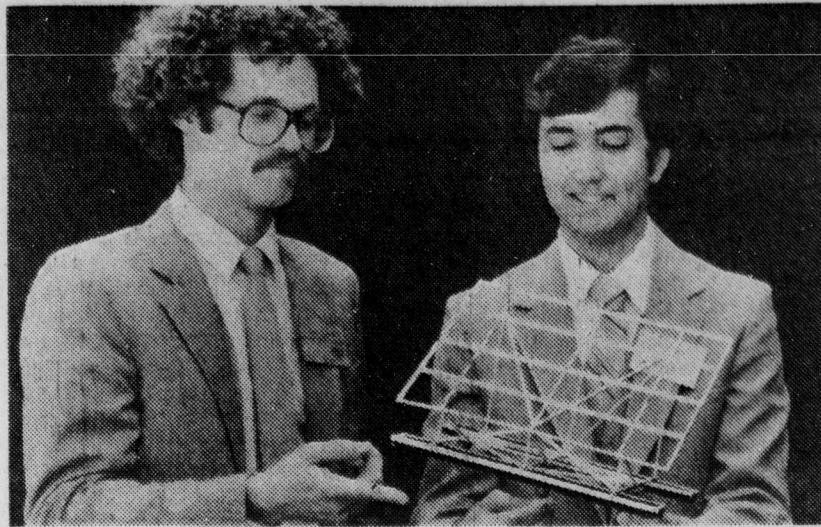

The reservoir provides a large flat area that is not constantly in the shadows of the island's mountain peaks.

After flying over the site, students went to work on a system that would float on the water's surface.

What they came up with was a series of floating platforms linked together and anchored to the reservoir's floor.

Tong Lim, another student who worked on the project, said the platforms would be hooked up to an on-shore rotor that would keep the solar collectors pointing toward the sun.

Because each platform is linked together, three onshore engines would be necessary to rotate the panels.

Cost of the project would range from $4 million to $4.5 million, Lim said, but those costs could be reduced by as much as 15 percent.

Since energy demand will continue at night and on cloudy days, the diesel generators would still be necessary.

A less expensive solution to another problem was offered by students working on a project for Western LNG (Liquid Natural Gas) Terminal Associates.

Students were asked by the company to design a weather station and data on a solar heater logging system for the Point Conception LNG facility.

Other students worked on programming a computer to recognize spoken words for Interstate Electronics.

Projects Day is part of Harvey Mudd College's effort to "humanize" engineering. Sponsors put up $10,000 that is used by students to develop needed information for the companies.

Projects developed by students in the past include a musical entertainment system that utilizes the vibratory sensitivity of the skin and a signal processing device that indicates the exact position of 175 control rods in a nuclear power reactor for a backup safety system.

Acting dean named at Kellogg West

D. Wayne Williams, professor in the department of management science and business law, has been appointed acting dean of Continuing Education and director of Kellogg West by Cal Poly Pomona president Hugh O. La Bounty Jr.

Kellogg West, funded primarily by a grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation in Battle Creek, Mich., was the first continuing education facility established for an entire statewide system of higher education. The center offers assistance to groups and individuals who seek to improve and update their occupational competencies and enhance their personal and cultural enrichment through flexible educational programming.

Williams received his bachelor of science from Cal Poly Pomona in 1966, and a masters in business administration from the University of Southern California in 1967. He joined the Cal Poly faculty in 1967, and was chairman of the business management department from 1969-73. He was appointed director of the small busi-development center in April 1978.

A past member of the faculty senate, Williams acted as advisor to Delta Sigma Pi, international business fraternity, for several years; served on the Cal Poly Pomona Alumni Association board, and has served on numerous university committees. He has been a part-time lecturer at Pomona College, University of La Verne and the University of California, Riverside.

D. Wayne Williams

His new responsibilities include the administration of Open University classes, the external master of engineering degree at Fluor Corporation in Irvine and support activities in management.

Williams lives in Claremont with his wife, Alice, and children, Trevor and Andrea.

Medfly war still fought

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service
SACRAMENTO—When the first advance scouts of the Mediterranean fruit fly appeared in Santa Clara County's agricultural pest traps last June, they set in motion a chain of events that reverberated all the way to Taiwan on the other side of the Pacific—and has involved such diverse volunteer organizations as the Boy Scouts, Future Farmers and the California National Guard.

And it set off a tug-of-war between two urgent demands on man's ingenuity—how to protect his crops against the ravages of this insect, and at the same time protect the environment and public health.

Today, the battle has by no means been won, but there is hope. And if worse comes to worst, man still has one more weapon up his sleeve—one that he hates to use, but will if it becomes necessary to save a major chunk of California's agriculture.

The fruit fly is particularly devastating to man because it lays its eggs in the developing fruit, and the hatching larvae then—if not prevented from doing so by heroic measures—can spread to other areas of the nation and world in the produce.

And so the nation of Taiwan embargoed all produce from the Santa Clara Valley, and other nations were considering doing so, as a means of guarding against a similar outbreak there. And California's Director of Food and Agriculture, Richard E. Rominger and his chief deputy, Jerry Scribner, who heads this state's "Medfly" task force, had to fly to Florida to head off an impending embargo of California fruits and vegetables.

They were able to convince Florida that California could keep the pest from spreading outside the 500-square-mile quarantine area. However, Florida said it will continue to watch closely what happens during the coming spring and summer months when the Medfly is most active.

In an effort to outsmart the Medfly, man is utilizing a tactic of empty love—each week releasing a hundred million sterile fruit flies, which will mate with female wild flies but produce no offspring.

It hasn't been an easy tactic to bring off. Sterile fruit flies are in short supply and a minimum of 100 of them is needed for each wild fly to ensure that the intended romance will come off as planned.

Worried by the delays, California's Department of Food and Agriculture proposed an aerial bait spray program in the infected area. This program, however, was almost unanimously rejected by local residents and their political jurisdictions through fears of what it might do to the environment and to public health.

Then the department proposed a massive ground spraying and fruit removal program within the 43.5-square-mile core of the nearly 500-square-mile quarantine area. That, too, went more slowly than necessary, so on Christmas Eve, Gov. Jerry Brown at Rominger's urging declared a state of emergency and mobilized resources from five additional state agencies—the State Department of Forestry, the California Conservation Corps, the Office of Emergency Services, the National Guard, and the California Department of Transportation.

Anxiety hampers dieters

For dieters, the holidays have to be the most difficult time of the year. Confronted with trays and tables laden with mouth-watering goodies, urged to try this hors d'oeuvre and that candy, serious dieters and even people trying to maintain their weight-despair.

"And anxiety about gaining weight only promotes eating even more," says Laurel Mellin, an assistant clinical registered dietitian and nutritionist.

The holidays are a time of emotional and physical stress, says Mellin, an assistant clinical professor in the Department of Pediatrics, Adolescent Medicine Unit, University of California at San Francisco. Young and older people alike have "unrealistic expectations about how perfect the holidays will be," and consequently may become anxious and depressed. These emotions can trigger them to eat when they are not really hungry.

At home, Mellin suggests, you can deal with these emotions by participating in physical activity instead of eating, say, a piece of fruitcake. "Activity refreshes you mentally and physically," she feels, "to say nothing of working off excess calories."

At the social situations which abound during the holidays—cocktail parties, buffets, dinners, family get-togethers—it can be more difficult to exercise control. But it can be done by taking a positive approach to the situation, says Mellin. She offers some strategies for enjoying holiday festivities and food without anxiety.

The key to success is to decide on a plan for eating before you leave your house. Mellin suggests three options: "Eat most everything served, but very small amounts; eat only low-calorie foods; or indulge yourself but eat moderately for the next few days."

She advises everyone to "eat during the day, and not approach a social situation starving." Foods from the four food groups—milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals, and be included in your food choices every day.

Instead of thinking about a party as an eating occasion, remember it's primarily a social occasion and concentrate on talking to people.

"Another strategy you can plan beforehand is to say 'No, thank's every other time you're offered another hors d'oeuvre. You'll realize you really are in control of what you eat.'"

Religion holds important place in U.S. history

By REV. M. H. SAEGER

Montclair Ministerial Association

Did you know that America was truly built on the foundation of God and the need for Him to help America become what it is today? All the way from the Pilgrims, to Washington, to Jefferson, to Franklin, to Lincoln, and others, God was important to their needs and their problems. Even today, our legislatures have a chaplain; there is an annual "Prayer Breakfast" among our national leaders; even in our own community; each of the council meetings is opened with prayer. We have our own "Mayor's Prayer Breakfast" here in Montclair. It would seem to me, that this says something real low and clear. God is absolutely necessary for Americans, for political leaders; for businessmen; for fathers in their homes; for mothers in their positions; (and oh my, what important positions mothers have!!)

I read about all the disasters; all the terrible weather conditions; all the wrecks of planes, trains, and cars; all the tornadoes; this blowing up, and that burning up; I wonder?? Is God trying to tell us something here in America? Here in Montclair? Is He trying to get our attention in this way, since maybe we don't give it to Him in other ways? I don't know, I really don't, but I really and truly wonder about that! And if He is talking to us, are YOU listening? Are we listening? Or do we go right on with our daily life, thinking that all is well, all is going along real fine.

To those of you who might happen to read this article, when is the last time you recognized God in your life? When is the last time you bowed your knee to Him? When is the last time you had devotions in your home? When is the last time you attended worship service? When is the last time you prayed with your wife and children? When is the last time you recognized that what we have is a gift from God? Surely not something that we made and did all by ourselves! But for the grace of God, we would have nothing at all. I really believe that!

I guess with all this then, I am urging you to take time for God; take time to pray, make time to be in the church of your choice with your family regularly. Recognize your dependence on God, who truly is the Power of both Heaven and earth! God really is good, and I invite you to believe and trust Him, now, today, TODAY!

Rev. Saeger is minister at Trinity Lutheran Church in Montclair.

Rialto YWCA chief

Council names new director

The Pomona Valley Council of Churches has called as its new executive director Rosemary E. "Lucky" Phelps of Rialto. She succeeds Audrey Lightbody, who recently moved to Vallejo.

The search committee recommended Mrs. Phelps to the council was headed by the Rev. Morgan Sly, minister of Pomona's First Christian Church and a former president of the council. Dr. Lynn Jackson, who served as interim executive of the council, pending the selection of the new executive, will return to her post as director of the council's hunger project.

Mrs. Phelps comes to this new post from the directorship of the Rialto YWCA. She served also as program director of the San Bernardino YWCA. She had administrative responsibility for 16 program heads, assisted in the organization's development goals and worked with a budget of $330,000. Stating her interest in this new position, she wrote, "I have always celebrated ecumenicity and am enthusiastic about ecumenical expression and cooperation." Her husband is Thomas Phelps, a teacher in Colton Junior High School. The Phelps have four grown children.

Having had wide experience in the work of the church at all levels, Mrs. Phelps has served as elder and deacon in the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and as stated clerk for the Presbytery of Riverside for nine years, interpreting and implementing Presbyterian policy and action.

Pomona Valley's new council executive director served nationally as chairperson of her denomination's General Assembly Committee on Nominations and on its Task Force on Women. She has held also several key volunteer positions for the Synod of California and the Riverside Presbytery.

Mrs. Phelps has been active in local community concerns. She was a member of the Arrowhead United Way board of directors, the Colton and Rialto chambers of commerce and chairperson of Colton's Children's Services Council. She is expected to begin her new work on April 1, headquartered at 1753 North Park Ave., Pomona. The Pomona Valley Council of Churches carries on a vigorous and comprehensive range of cooperative ministries, serving churches in 11 communities extending from Walnut on the west to Cucamonga on the east. Current president is the Rev. Richard Bunce, minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Upland. The Council is considered one of the most effective ecumenical bodies in the U.S.A.

YMCA executive

Woman enjoys top administrative position

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

When Phyllis A. Murphy first assumed a top administrative position with the Pomona YMCA, a board member said to her, "I've got nothing against you, but a woman should stay in the home and not run a YMCA."

A short time later, Murphy said the director told her, "For a woman, you're all right!"

This encounter is the only time Murphy has had anything derogatory or negative said about her work in a Young Men's Christian Association.

On July 1 of last year, Murphy was named associate general director of the Pomona YMCA, promoted from the position of central branch executive director.

Murphy admitted as a branch director, it was "unusual" to have a woman running a YMCA which includes rooms for 49 men, indoor swimming pool, handball and racketball courts and basketball court. "I just never thought much about it," she said.

In her position as associate general director, Murphy is responsible for the supervision of the Pomona YMCA branches in Claremont, Diamond Bar, Walnut, San Dimas, La Verne and the central branch. Each branch has an executive director and Murphy explained that she works with him.

"Each branch is unique and is designed to the needs of the community," she said.

Murphy grew up in Pomona and started started going to the YMCA when she was a youngster to take swimming lessons and gymnastics. At 14, she became a volunteer leader and earned 50 cents an hour. Later she became a leaderette and directed craft classes and led the singing along with directing other activities.

She was on the YMCA swimming and gymnastics teams and while in high school became a staff member working three days a week.

During the years she was a student at Mt. San Antonio College, Walnut, and a physical education major at Cal Poly Pomona, Murphy continued working at the Y. "I was given more responsibilities and coached the swimming and gym teams," she said. Murphy also worked summers in the camping program.

When older, Murphy directed women's programs.

"I was going to be a physical education teacher in a school," she said, "but Dwile Heggem, the general director, offered a position as program director ... at that time there weren't many women directors in YMCAs ... I took the job and worked 35 to 40 hours a week on top of going to school."

When she graduated from college, there was no thought of leaving the YMCA. "I never thought about it as being a woman in a men's world," Murphy said. "I never think about it and I've never been treated that way."

The associate general director said the YMCA was started as a Christian Bible Study group in 1844 by George Williams in London, England, and 12 young men belonged to the group.

It was 1851 when the first YMCA in the United States was located in Boston. In the early years, the YMCA had racial and religious barriers, but Murphy said, "That's a thing of the past. We have no religious, color or sex barriers ... we have no barriers at all."

The Pomona YMCA has a membership of 14,000 and serves "14,000 and more who aren't members," Murphy said. All sorts of indoor and outdoor programs are available for the whole family, including a successful junior cadet police-type academy run by Willie White, a reserve policeman of the Pomona Police Department.

In the meantime, the Y enthusiast met Jim Murphy at Cal Poly. They married and have two daughters, Jill and Kari, (both of course enrolled in YMCA programs).

Murphy finds time to be active in the community and currently is president of Pomona Soroptimists International. She also is president of the Southern Pacific Chapter, Professional Directors. The chapter covers from Bakersfield to Santa Barbara and south to San Diego and Arizona.

"I find this an exciting group to work with," she said.

The Murphy family spends time together on camping trips to the Colorado River for water skiing.

"I like working ... I like the double role (family-executive) as I'm people oriented ... I like helping people," the energetic Murphy said.

"I never sat back and said I wanted to be director of a YMCA," she said. "I've fallen into whatever has come my way."

We prepare your glasses in our ultra-modern laboratory under strict quality controls. This gives us lower costs than the small dispenser who must buy from an independent lab. In addition, our purchasing volume gets us substantial cost savings on materials. AND we work on LOW PROFIT MARGINS compared to industry's norms.

Why we should fill your doctor's eyeglass prescription:

Many people feel strange about taking their eyeglass prescription from one doctor to another to be filled. Our policy is simply to make glasses of the highest quality at the lowest possible prices no matter who examined your eyes. No appointment is necessary to have your prescription filled or to have your glasses duplicated.

"Touch For Health," one of several non-credit classes at Mt. San Antonio College available during May, will be held Friday, at 6 p.m., and will conclude Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A combination of applied kinesiology, muscle testing and balancing, acupressure, stress and pain management, and nutritional and emotional re-education, the two-day workshop is designed to enable both lay persons and health care professionals to become familiar with the body's own internal balance and self-care processes.

The students will become familiar with 14 essential muscle systems and meridians, with the meanings of weakness and pain in certain muscles, and how to test for such weakness. Workshop fee is $12.

"Psychology of Thin Eating," a one-day workshop, will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. How to change eating habits, lose weight without dieting, and relax through self-hypnosis rather than eating are parts of the program.

"Creative Encounter with Yourself" is a two-day workshop that will begin Friday at 7 p.m., and will conclude Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Students will use introspection and group activities to develop a more creative lifestyle, to risk learning more about who they are, what their goals are, and to understand how they can expand their creative powers and leadership skills.

Reservations and fee payments may be made in the Community Services Office, Building 4, Room 221, Extension 220.

Buy a plant today

The Ornamental Horticulture Club at Mt. San Antonio College is presenting its second annual plant sale, through Saturday.

Sale items include indoor as well as outdoor plants, vegetables, annuals and exotics.

The sale is being held on the main walkway between the Student Center and the Social Science Patio from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and at the horticulture unit from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday.

Last Year's initial sale was a huge success. And with the continued support and donations of local nurseries and landscape design firms and the excellent specimens grown by the students, this year's promises to be even better.

Hypericums: useful, thick ground cover

Would you like to have Aaron's beard or St. Johnswort in your garden? Naturally, neither is a beard or a saint but the common names for one of the best ground covers we know of - Hypericum.

Aaron's beard grows a foot tall, forming a dense ground cover. It cannot stand constant traffic but is grown for its oval green leaves and their bright yellow blossoms with prominent stamens that flower in spring and summer. It is evergreen, though in colder climates the plant will lose some of its leaves and is considered semideciduous. It is fast-growing and has been used successfully on hillsides to control erosion. Aaron's beard is moderately slow to start, but after the first year it moves out quickly. Attention with the hose will hasten the progress.

The Hypericum group of plants does its best along moist, mild-weathered coastal areas in full sun. For those hot-summer locations in the state, plant Hypericum in part shade. It will take to almost any kind of soil.

Other than Aaron's beard, other Hypericums range from a rare prostrate form with miniature flowers to shrubs that mound up to four feet or more. All of these are distinguished by the yellow cups of color they bear.

Most commonly used of the other species of Hypericum is the gold flower (H. moserianum). It is an arching small shrub that seldom grows more than two feet high and is ideal in semi-shaded situations. Group these little shrubs for more pleasing results.

Still another species of this plant group is Hypericum "Hidcote," more commonly known as Henry's golden cup. It will grow in an arching manner to a height of some four feet. It will bloom all summer long for you.

With proper selection and care, house plants chase winter blues

If you're looking for an inexpensive way to chase the winter blues, try a little indoor gardening. A flowering house plant or two on a sunny windowsill can lift your spirits and the care and nurturing involved will put you in the mood of spring.

"While many plants enter into dormancy during the cold months," says Grace Ulbricht, consumer adviser, "others, like the African Violet which is native to the southern part of Central America where the seasons mirror our own, blossom freely all winter." Other flowering varieties include impatiens, geraniums and the begonia.

Even a few plants lined up haphazardly will give a room a splash of greenery and cheer. And the smallest varieties cost less than a dollar each at your local variety store.

If you decide to take in a house plant, how do you know that healthy looking specimen won't drop dead the minute it comes to live with you? There's no guarantee, but Ulbricht offers a few tips for selecting and caring for your house plants:

— Choose a perky plant with good color. Look for new growth and fairly thick foliage.

— Inspect the leaves for insects and brown or pruned edges. Tug gently to see if the plant is secure. It will need good root structure to survive.

— Smell the plant's oil. Breathe deeply and reject it if there's a sour odor. It should give off a fresh earthy scent.

— Once home, put the plant through a further inspection and quarantine it to protect your other plants. Wash the leaves with mild soapy water to kill insects. Don't fertilize or transplant for at least two months. Don't panic if your plant loses a few leaves during the first few weeks. It's just adjusting to its new environment.

— Keep the plant in a relatively cool place.

— Most plants come with plant markers identifying their type along with suggestions for proper care. To insure continued good health, read and follow the instructions carefully.

"Plants don't like cold and can't even take a touch of frost," the adviser notes. "If you live in a cold climate, when you buy the plant consider how far it will have to travel. If it's only going as far as your parked car, a sheet of wrapping paper will protect it. If the temperature is low, button it up under your overcoat and the heat of your body will provide all the warmth the plant can use."

The hardest thing to tell a new plant owner and the most threatening to the plant's survival, says the adviser, is how often to water it. Experience is the best teacher. But no matter how often it needs to be watered, there's one rule of thumb: when you water it, water it carefully. Pour off all the water that drains through to the saucer. Never allow a plant to sit in excess water, for this could lead to root rot.

Finally, remember that healthy house plants are not the result of luck. There are five parameters to be considered: soil, light, temperature, water and humidity. The light and temperature adjustment in a home is limited. So, in selecting a house plant, allow the prevailing conditions to dictate the plants you'll live with.

London's Thorpe Park offers themes and ships

A new "theme" park which recently opened 20 miles west of London, has enough themes to keep all sorts of people busy and happy, with a replica of a Viking ship and Roman Galley, World War I fighter aircraft, models of famous castles and buildings, and water-skiing and a rowing center.

It's Thorpe Park, a 400 acre 4-lake center built around old gravel pits. One area of the park includes scenes from British history, with full-sized replicas of Roman and Viking ships built at the same shipyard in Appledore, Devon, which produced a replica of Sir Francis Drake's "Golden Hinde" several years ago.

The full-sized ships were rowed, motored and sailed up the English Channel to the River Thames, and from there to the center. Other scenes include a Stone Age cave, a Norman Motte and Bailey Castle (the type used by William the Conqueror), and King John's Pavilion at the signing of the Magna Carta, Runnymede.

Two lawmakers pledge to bolster Hispanic voice

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The two state legislators with the most say over drawing lines that will shape California politics for the next 10 years pledged Saturday to come up with reapportionment plans improving Hispanic representation.

Sen. Dan Boatwright, D-Concord, and Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, took part in a reapportionment conference sponsored by the Rose Institute at Claremont Men's College.

Each chairs his house's Elections and Reapportionment Committee.

Many of the comments Saturday focused on Proposition 6, the measure state voters approved last June to reduce instances in which a legislative district splits up a city or overlaps into two counties.

However, Boatwright and Alatorre said the mandate of U.S. Supreme Court for "one man, one vote," remains the foremost guideline in the reapportionment plans.

Following the federal census, the Legislature is charged with redrawing district lines for the Senate, Assembly, California's congressional seats and the state Board of Equalization.

The results are almost sure to spark controversy, and both legislators said they expected suits challenging the reapportionment plans in court.

But Boatwright and Alatorre defended procedures they are using in the decennial exercise, which some criticize as putting the fox in charge of guarding the chicken coop.

Boatwright said the Legislature is "trying to come up with plans having districts with no more than 1 percent deviation from their ideal populations for equal representation.

For each resident of the state to have a mathematically equal say in government, each Senate district would have a population of 592,000. Congressional districts would have 525,000 people and Assembly districts some 295,000.

Boatwright said, "There are some real problems in the state. San Francisco lost actual population. So, they're going to lose dramatically in this reapportionment, as is Los Angeles," whose growth did not keep pace with the 18.5 percent increase in population for California as a whole.

Because Proposition 6 requires that redistricting start at the state's northern border and move south, Boatwright and Alatorre said some cities and counties inevitably will be split up contrary to the goals of the measure.

Alatorre said, "We can talk about fair and equitable, and obviously we are concerned in trying to come up with a plan that is fair and equitable. I think it will be fair and equitable to some, and obviously it's not going to be fair and equitable to others."

He stressed his commitment to plans that would increase chances of Hispanics being elected to the state Legislature and Congress.

Assembly Speaker Willie Brown said last week reapportionment should not create districts where Hispanic candidates can win at the expense of incumbent Democrats. He also said efforts to increase the number of seats held by Hispanics are hindered by poor voter turnout in their areas.

Alatorre, a Mexican-American, said, "He's the speaker, but I'm the chairman."

Boatwright said, "This is not a promise, but I'm going to try to create two majority-Hispanic Senate districts and at least work on with Richard two majority-Hispanic congressional seats."

Boatwright and Alatorre are hoping the Legislature will finish its reapportionment plans by June 15. Saying the Legislature must concentrate on the state budget, they defended their committees' decisions not to hold more hearings outside Sacramento once new district boundaries are actually drafted.

The Rose Institute has completed its research on reapportionment, is now drawing model plans for redistricting and stands ready with its sophisticated computer equipment and experts to comment on the Legislature's finished plans.

Because the institute's reapportionment work is funded by California Roundtable, an organization of top corporate executives, and its two top staffers worked on the Republican reapportionment plan in the early 1970s, some legislative Democrats view the institute with suspicion.

Boatwright said the institute's hopes of a non-partisan reputation were hurt by a Los Angeles Times article quoting Assembly Minority Leader Carol Hallett as saying the institute's plan will be a Republican plan.

Alatorre said he had "total respect" for the institute, but stressed that responsibility for reapportionment rests with the Legislature.

"If the tables were reversed and Republicans were in control and we (Democrats) had the equivalent of the Rose Institute, I think that they would have some misgivings, but we would be comfortable," he said.

Sexuality seminar

A seminar on "Living Positively with Sexuality in Today's World" will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. by the Right to Life League of Southern California in Our Lady of Assumption Church, 543 Berkeley, Claremont.

The program will focus on the use of abstinence as a method of premarital birth control. The event is especially geared for teen-agers.

The public is invited to attend. Right to Life is a non-profit, non-sectarian organization which operates a 24-hour "Hotline" offering free services, counseling and information to those with unplanned pregnancies. For further information call 985-0205.

SBA loan will be used for cafeteria

The Pomona Valley Workshop has received official notification from Henry Clay, chief of finance of the Small Business Administration, that an SBA loan has been approved for the food service/cafeteria.

The loan will allow the workshop to build a 4,500 square foot addition to house the cafeteria. The main thrust of the new program will be to train handicapped adults in food service skills and ultimately lead them into competitive employment, Lou Marchio, director of the workshop, explained.

"Now that the loan is assured," Marchio said, "competitive bidding for the actual construction will be invited. It is expected construction will be completed this September, and a formal ribbon-cutting ceremony will take place shortly thereafter."

The completed cafeteria will accommodate 125 diners at one sitting and will have 20 food service training stations. The training stations will include cashier training, short order cooks, fast foods, dishwashing, busing, salad preparation and janitorial training. An individual will be enrolled for a maximum of six months at which time he will be assisted in seeking competitive employment.

Marchio said, "It is hoped that with early completion of training by some of the trainees, and being an open-ended program, as many as 50 graduates will be employable each year."

The Pomona Valley Workshop is a facility for training the developmentally handicapped.

Only one OIA airline fits the bill

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

They call this city's airport — Ontario International Airport — but the only airline to fly internationally in and out of here is a little line called Air Cortez, one vital to the vast and increasing numbers of Americans craving the exciting fishing experience of Mexico's Sea of Cortez.

Air Cortez, with its two twin-engined Beechcrafts and Cessnas, is the brainchild of 25-year-old Bill Schlick, line president, and it is fighting for its place in the sun.

The "corporate" side of the Air Cortez story might be that it is growing but also that it has just suffered a rather unusual loss — one of its planes, a DC-3, was stolen while en route to a servicing and overhaul appointment in Texas.

The real story of the line, however, is its operation in twice-a-week (Thursdays and Fridays) flights to the fishing grounds off Guaymas, Mulege (pronounced MOO-le-hay) and Loreto, the first named on the Mexican mainland and West Coast and the last two on the Sea of Cortez coast of Baja California Sur.

The flights are Thursday and Friday going south and Sunday and Monday returning to Ontario.

Four -striper chief pilot Roger Johnson, 39 and friendly, will likely pilot your Beechcraft. He also will hustle baggage, vacuum the plane's interior, provide ice and a container (at a price) for you to carry your fish in on return, and he will be local guide and all-around good fellow all along the way and at your destination if he happens to be laying over there.

Johnson has flown all kinds of aircraft — for auto firms in Detroit, for several charters and other employers since he got his first pilot's license in 1959. But, he loves his present assignment. "I like Air Cortez," he said in an interview from the pilot's seat to that of the co-pilot which this time was occupied by the newsmen joining him. "I've been flying to Baja five years, three years for this line (Air Cortez is just starting its fourth year of operations). I love the wonderful Mexican people down there. And, the pace is just right. I don't like to work too hard."

Johnson is informal in the extreme — except when he is in the pilot's seat. He is just as strict about seat buckles and safety in general as any 747 pilot and he is 100 percent official on the radio.

He is his own maintenance man, too, en route and at his three stops (plus one U.S. Customs stop at either Yuma, Ariz., or Calexico, Calif., on return), and his inspections of equipment are complete and reassuring.

His Beechcraft seats eight passengers, including the one in the co-pilot's seat, and Johnson is eager to tell in advance where he will be flying — a wonderfully scenic route all the way; with the scenery visible from the 5,000 to 7,000 feet altitude he flies (vs. the "no scenery" jet altitudes of over 30,000 feet).

Johnson lands at dirt runways in Mulege and Loreto, and he frequently must improvise while helping passengers with the unloading of baggage. Most baggage is stacked in the plane's interior, but a nose compartment that once held marginally-used radios now offers more baggage stowage. In Mulege, Johnson may grab the nearest empty 55-gallon drum, clamber atop it, balance himself and hand luggage down to a friendly Mexican volunteer. Or, he may borrow a pickup truck along the Loreto airport's runway, back it up flush with the plane and use it for an unloading platform.

While much of Johnson's and Air Cortez' operation may seem informal, it is one of the few airlines offering continuous scheduled service to Baja California from Southern California and the only one flying from Ontario's "international" airport.

And, all operations are 100 percent serious. Johnson assigns passenger seats according to safety weight factors and he stores baggage the same way. "I want to fly 20 more years," he said, "and I'm just as much interested in safety as the passengers are."

Schlick, although only 25, is equally serious about what some might say is a "toy" airline. "I've been dead serious about flying," he said, "ever since I first flew in high school, and I know now more than ever that if we are going to succeed we must run a very friendly but very serious operation. I also know that if we stay honest — and we will — that in the end we'll come out on top."

Actually, Schlick, Johnson and the others of Air Cortez have a good chance of success. They have survived over three years and they have a growing market, particularly in flights to Loreto, where the Mexican government is spending millions to develop a first-class resort community.

Meanwhile, a flight with Johnson is a genuine delight — and, perhaps, the most convenient way to fulfill a fisherman's urge to catch that dolphin or other "big one" in the Sea of Cortez.

Roger Johnson wears four stripes as chief pilot for Air Cortez. However, he is a jack of all trades for the only airline out of Ontario International Airport that is truly international.

Theft of equipment battled

The Sheriff's Crime Prevention Unit has joined forces with the San Bernardino County Farm Bureau to combat the rising thefts of agricultural products and equipment, Sheriff Frank Bland announced recently.

Farm equipment has few identifying markings and seldom is returned to owners after thefts, officials say. The Chino area loses thousands of dollars each year in stolen equipment, which can easily be sold in other states.

Under the Farm Bureau program an identifying number is issued and maintained in a nationwide computer system, so that authorities can identify and contact rightful owners to find out whether suspicious equipment has been stolen.

Applications for the identification numbers may be obtained from the crime prevention officer at the Sheriff's West End substation at Mountain Avenue and Sixth Street in Ontario. Marking tools will also be available through the officer.

Irrigation equipment can be marked by painting numbers on lengths of pipe, and grain or hay shipments may be identified with slips of confetti bearing the

Valuable old violin donated to college

Cal Poly Pomona is the recipient of a violin valued at $18,000. The instrument was donated to the university by violinist Israel Baker of Los Angeles. The instrument bears a facsimile label of Petrus Guarnerius of Cremona. According to Mr. Kyoza Wantanube, who is a member of the Violin Society of America, this violin is of the Milanese, Giovanni Grancino school which originated around the first decade of the 18th century.

The collector's item was presented to Dr. Donald A. Ambrosio, acting chair of the music department, by Baker. Ambrosio became acquainted with the famous violinist when he studied the violin under Baker while attending Claremont Graduate School.

The valuable maple-wood instrument will not be a showpiece collecting dust. Ambrosio recently used it to perform at a recent president's council dinner and he intends for students to use the instrument for recitals and special performances.

Israel Baker is an accomplished, talented musician of international reputation, who has soloed with major American orchestras, recorded with RCA and Columbia.

From tragic, violent shooting comes friendship to immigrants

By STEVEN R. CHURM
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — This is the story of a young Mexican who crossed the border six months ago, and of a German who landed in America 25 years ago.

It is also the tale of two American dreams.

One dream was shattered by a paralyzing gunshot. The other dream came true, but has now been soured by that same act of violence.

Three months ago, Guadalupe Martinez, an 18-year-old Mexican immigrant, and Helmut Ackermann, a 41-year-old textile executive, didn't know each other.

The two worked for the same company, Lorber Industries, a textile manufacturing firm in an industrial section of Carson.

Martinez was a laborer in the firm's main plant. He had left his family and home near Acapulco seven months ago to work in America and learn English so he could return home some day and work in the exclusive Mexican coastal resort.

Ackermann was born in 1940 in Hitler's Germany. He spent most of his youth in an orphanage.

Ackermann never knew his father, killed fighting in the German army.

When Ackermann was 15, he heard that his mother had married an American soldier and immigrated to Los Angeles. He followed them here.

Today, Ackermann is a vice president at Lorber. He works in a comfortable, air-conditioned front office.

When Martinez and Ackermann met for the first time three months ago, it was not at the place where they both work but at County Harbor — UCLA Medical Center.

Martinez was paralyzed from the waist down. Less than half a block from the Lorber plant on South Figueroa Street, a robber had shot him in the back.

Martinez spoke no English. Ackermann spoke no Spanish. Both had come to America years apart for the same reason — opportunity.

Now both were in the hospital wondering what had gone wrong with the American Dream.

Even now, Ackermann shakes his head and wonders why.

"The vindictiveness, the utter senseless act of violence is so shocking that I am thinking of moving my family away from Los Angeles," Ackermann said, taking a long drag on a cigarette.

"This town, this region has become a war zone, and Guadalupe is just another forgotten victim."

It "would have been easy," Ackermann said, "to write (Martinez) off as a statistic. But is that how humans treat other humans?"

Ackermann's company has given Martinez a new job and is helping him find a place to live.

The friendship between Ackermann and Martinez is the kind born of misery and tragedy.

The tragedy happened on a Tuesday night in early November.

It was payday at Lorber. After work, Martinez had cashed his check and gone to night school in Gardena where he was studying English. At about 9 p.m. he and a friend were walking south on Figueroa Street toward the plant to meet some friends and get a ride home to Compton when a car pulled alongside the pair.

Two black men waving pistols jumped out of the car and ordered Martinez and his friend to hand over their wallets. They complied.

The robbers then told Martinez he and his friend could go. Martinez explained later through an interpreter.

The pair turned and started to walk away.

The next thing Martinez remembers is a sharp pain in his back and his face slamming into the asphalt.

The robbers had fired one bullet into his back, which hit his nervous system and permanently paralyzed him from the waist down.

Martinez said the robbers tried to shoot his friend, but their gun jammed. As Martinez' friend ran down the street to get help from a Lorber security guard, the robbers drove away.

Martinez was rushed to County Harbor, where he spent 15 days in intensive care. He was then moved to Rancho Los Amigos rehabilitation center for two months before he returned to work part time at Lorber in December.

Police have no suspects, and chances of finding the robbers based on the evidence collected are near impossible.

But Martinez says he is not bitter. It could have happened in Mexico as well as here," he said.

But there has been pain. Martinez told his family in Mexico that he had an accident, but he is afraid to tell them he is paralyzed.

Back home he had played soccer, tennis and basketball. Now he is a secretary, filing papers and keeping records from his wheelchair.

He and his cousin, Carlos, have spent nearly a month looking for a place to live in southwest Los Angeles County with no luck.

Not only does he have language and financial handicaps, but now he has a physical handicap.

"I never realized, despite all that's been written and reported, how tough it is for handicapped people to find housing and help," Ackermann said looking across the company's plush conference room at Martinez, who sat nervously in his wheelchair unable to understand.

"It's a damn shame we spend so much time worrying about what happens to criminals in this country and so little time concerned about the victims. They are the real losers," he said.

"I am beginning to realize that even in America it's easy to close our eyes to people like Guadalupe," he said. "But I'm not going to let it happen this time."

Ackermann remembered when he offered Martinez a new job at Lorber after the robbery. Martinez was at the rehabilitation center at the time, lifting weights, learning how to wash and feed himself and struggling to recover mentally from the incident.

"When I told him about the job, there was a special look in his eyes, a look I remember seeing once back in Germany after the war," Ackermann said.

"I remember whenever an American military convoy would roll through town, all the kids in my school would rush out and line the streets," he said. "We were starving and the Americans would toss C-rations," he continued. "But after the convoy passed and the kids went to class, I noticed a little boy standing alone with tears in his eyes."

"I looked at him and he looked at me," Ackermann said, lighting another cigarette. "I gave him the C-rations I had gotten and his eyes just started to sparkle. It was the same look Guadalupe had."

Teddy bears, soft sculptures top modern collectible list

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

Stuffed teddy bears, "Little People" soft sculptures and lacquer boxes from Russia are the three modern collectibles recommended as good investments by an antique and collectible expert.

Gwen Zenerold of Des Moines, Iowa, conducted a two-day seminar recently for the Assistance League of Upland at its League Center in Cucamonga. The recent event was open to the public for a fee.

"One of the best collectibles for 1981 is a special teddy bear that is going to be one of the best investments you can make this year," she advised.

"The most universally popular toy in the world, the teddy bear started in America in 1903 when Teddy Roosevelt was president and hunted bears," she said.

The story went that while hunting, Roosevelt always refused to shoot the mother bears who had cubs. The president of Ideal Toy Corp. wrote to the President, saying that Roosevelt had inspired him to manufacture a little cub bear and could he name the bear after the president. Thus was the teddy bear born.

"That teddy bear is now worth $500 for the original teddy made in 1903 of mustard-colored plush," Mrs. Zenerold remarked.

Steiff, a Germany company, also made teddy bears and now has made a limited-edition anniversary teddy bear. They have made 5,000 of these stuffed animals for distribution in this country. All of the teddy bears are signed and have papers of identification.

"If you can find one, it will cost you $150. It will probably be being sold for $500 at the end of this year," she said.

The collectible expert next described an item which she said is "more crazy than pet rocks and has made headline news."

Created by Xavier Roberts of Cleveland, Ga., this latest fad is the "Little People" soft sculptures — don't call them dolls — from Babyland General Hospital.

Roberts, a potter by trade, had a dream in 1977 that he wanted to create something unique and different, and he came up with these cuddly and soft sculptures, which he called "Little People."

"You can't buy them, you just adopt them," Mrs. Zenerold said as she held up "Patience Cynthia," one of the "Little People" she has adopted.

She said that when you adopt a "Little People," you get legal papers that have been notarized. Each of the "Little People" have a name and a legend of personal history when they leave "Babyland General Hospital," where they are "created" or "born."

The cost of adoption varies with the "premature ones" going for less money, she noted. The more grown up such as "Patience Cynthia" sell for about $125. "Little People" salespeople wear nurses uniforms or doctors' smocks and talk about the soft-sculpture creations as those they were real children, up for adoption.

The final modern collectibles discussed by the appraiser were from Russia — "a country from which you don't get that many top-notch items," she said.

They are the Russian lacquer boxes made in a little village where the icon painters have lived for centuries.

Be sure you rely on the fine print before you buy—or sell. Of course, we mean the fine print in the Classified pages. That's where the great bargains are in merchandise, transportation, housing, and business services. The Classified fine print is the great way to sell your usable but no-longer-needed articles for welcome cash. In your newspaper, the fine print is important to smart buyers and sellers.

A MESSAGE TO CLASSIFIED AD USERS

You are about to invest money for an Ad and you are entitled to get results. To accomplish this it is necessary for you to TELL ALL about the details of your offer. Be sure you don't make any of the following errors that prevent results. Readers can't guess on important details. Remember, a well written, informative ad will get results faster and cost less in the long run.

1. Don't Omit The Address

Many out-of-town readers will write you but will not spend money for a long distance call

2. Don't Omit The Phone Number

Many readers will call you but do not find it convenient to come to your home

3. Don't Use Blind Box Numbers

They are difficult to answer and many people are suspicious of them
